

This video introduces the claim that Circumcision is a plot.

Circumcision is the practice of cutting the foreskin off of the penis. According to Happeh Theory, Circumcision is a plot to deprive a man of a natural teaching aid whose purpose is to help him evolve into a physically and mentally strong man.

To understand the reasoning behind why circumcision is a plot, it is necessary to know what a foreskin is and how it behaves.

The foreskin is a flap of skin that covers the forward part of the penis. This cylinder will represent a penis. This cylinder will represent a foreskin. The foreskin object is then moved into it's proper location relative to the penis object.

The foreskin covers the front of the penis except for the tip. The foreskin always stays in this position unless it is pulled back by some force. The foreskin covers and protects the front of the penis.

According to Happeh Theory, the human body behaves as if there is something like a foreskin that covers the head. Here is the example human body. This object will play the part of the foreskin on the head.

The foreskin on the head is not located on the outside of the head like the penis foreskin is located on the outside of the penis. The foreskin on the head is located inside of the head. The head of the example man will be made slightly transparent so the foreskin object can be seen inside.

According to Happeh Theory, the penis foreskin trains the head foreskin to always enclose and protect the head. Because the penis foreskin encloses the penis most of the time, the foreskin in the head is trained to cover the head most of the time.

According to Happeh Theory, the foreskin of the penis is a natural training aid to help a man change into a mentally and physically strong person. How does the penis foreskin train a man to become mentally and physically strong?

The penis foreskin can move back and forth over the penis. The front of it can retract back from the tip of the penis towards its origin as shown.

According to Happeh Theory, the foreskin on the penis and the foreskin on the head are linked. Every movement of the penis foreskin is duplicated by the foreskin in the head.

Here the foreskin on the penis and the foreskin in the head are moving simultaneously. The foreskin in the head moves up and down within the head.

According to Happeh Theory, the up and down motion of the head foreskin acts like a pump. The upwards motion brings energy, represented by the green box, up from the body and into the head and brain. This energy causes the head to physically grow and stimulates the brain to higher levels of mental performance.

If a man is circumcised, he has no foreskin on his penis to train the foreskin in his head. The foreskin in the head will not receive the signals that stimulate it to move up and down within the head. The man will not properly mature physically and mentally, because the pumping action of the head foreskin is not working properly.

According to Happeh Theory, A circumcised man is more likely to be weaker than he should be. Because the man is weaker than he should be, he poses less competition to other men.

According to Happeh Theory, that is the true purpose behind circumcision. To deprive a man of the penis foreskin so the foreskin on his head does not develop properly, which leads to the man being weaker than he should be. A weak man is no threat to the people who are behind the plot of circumcision.